DEPARTMENT RECEIVES HONOR AS MODEL FOR DIVERSITY AND GENDER EQUITY
Commissioner Jones’ Insurance Diversity Initiative Recognized as a Model Practice for Advancing Principles of Gender Equity

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif. — The California Department of Insurance today was honored at the 2018 Gender Equity Challenge Forum for its commitment to increase diversity within the insurance industry through Insurance Commissioner Dave Jones’ Insurance Diversity Initiative. The department is among one of the nine honorees and the only public agency to receive this notable recognition.

“The California Insurance Diversity Initiative started a conversation among insurers, diverse suppliers, governing board members, advocates, and stakeholders that has translated into action,” said Insurance Commissioner Dave Jones. “The doors of economic Enterprises' initiative, diversity outreach, of the surveys to collect and make public data regarding the diversity efforts of insurers, disseminates diversity. Provides annual initiative status for the spend.

Established by Commissioner Jones in 2011, the Insurance Diversity Initiative was recognized by the forum for advancing the principles of gender equity as a result of the transparency initiative that collects and disseminates data regarding the state of diversity in the insurance industry publicly. In an effort to focus on diversity issues within California's $310 billion insurance industry, Commissioner Jones created the initiative to encourage increased procurement from California's diverse suppliers, such as Women Business Enterprises (WBEs), and diversity among insurer governing boards.

In the first Insurance Diversity Survey in 2012, insurance companies self-reported their annual procurement spend in California with WBEs at $153 million. As of the last Insurance Diversity Survey collected for 2016, annual procurement spend from WBEs have increased over three-fold to $506.4 million. The critical data provides key metrics for measuring the progress of women in the areas of supplier and governing board diversity.

Commissioner Jones delivered an acceptance speech at the forum highlighting the main components of the initiative and underscoring the progress in gender equity made since its inception through the administration of the surveys to collect and make public data regarding the diversity efforts of insurers, as well as through outreach, partnerships, and the department-hosted Annual Diversity Summit.

It is an honor to have been appointed to the Insurance Diversity Task Force. Throughout my career promoting equality and inclusion has been one of my passions. As the owner of a marketing agency in San Ramon for the last two decades I am proud to call countless individuals in the API community my mentors. In addition, I relish mentoring others wishing to establish their own professional path in industries where their presence is in many instances still the exception. This Asian American Heritage month is an opportune time to reflect upon the opportunities California has offered so many and the promise it still has in store for all.

My story is similar to other Asian Americans who pursued opportunities in California. As the youngest of nine to an immigrant family from the Philippines I had a seemingly prescribed path to achieve success. The axiom implicit in my upbringing was: “You’re in this country and state now. Just get educated and don’t rock the boat.” Actually, that phrase may have been verbatim. Rather than pursuing the orthodox professional path of first-generation immigrants, I went to art school, much to the consternation of my parents. Pushing the envelope in this way was thanks in part to my civics teacher Mr. Hirabayashi at Lowell High in San Francisco.

When I finally made the move to start my own firm, the independence it afforded me was gratifying, but had its attendant hurdles from being a Filipino Woman. It took a little more to be heard and extra grit to be recognized.

Upon reflection of what Asian American Heritage Month means I remember attending a client meeting at a prominent bank. While being ushered to the elevator banks of the office tower an older generation Filipino gentleman at the security desk gave me an expressive thumbs-up. In his day, it was not common for a
I am grateful to the strides my fellow API leaders have made in the Golden State and hopeful the foundation we leave for the future. That future would have an API community unified and capable of amplifying its voice.

The Insurance Diversity Initiative was established by Insurance Commissioner Dave Jones in 2011 to address diversity issues within California’s $310 billion insurance industry. Specifically, these efforts are meant to increase procurement from California’s diverse suppliers, as well as to increase diversity amongst insurer governing boards. To accomplish these goals, the Department conducts outreach, creates partnerships, hosts events, and most importantly, administers surveys to collect and publicly disseminate information about the state of diversity in the insurance industry.
